

IN THE ABSTRACT

After page 17, please insert the following as the Abstract:

Abstract

An implant including an implant body configured for retention within a body comprising an implant section, a skin penetration section, and extracorporeal connector section, and a planar part surrounding and adjoining the skin penetration section in a sterile connection. The planar part is configured for adhering to skin tissue, and includes a surface configured for supporting a skin layer surrounding the skin penetration section.